Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act: Estimates of the Effect on the Prevalence of Employer-Sponsored Health Coverage

The share of employers offering health coverage has generally declined in the last decade. Researchers believe that certain provisions of the PPACA could affect employers' future willingness to offer health coverage, such as the availability of subsidized coverage through new health insurance marketplaces called "exchanges" and an "individual mandate" which will require most people to obtain health coverage or pay a tax penalty. Certain PPACA provisions are scheduled to take effect in 2014. Researchers have provided various estimates of the effect that PPACA may have on employer-sponsored coverage, and this is the Government Accountability Office's review of this research.
