

University of Miami International & Comparative Law Review

Now available in Hein's Current Online Subscription Model!

As globalization replaced the Cold War as the dominant political and cultural paradigm, students at the University of Miami School of Law established the Yearbook of International Law to inform the world's academic, legal, and business communities of the changing international legal landscape.

In 1998, the Yearbook assumed a new name: the University of Miami International and Comparative Law Review. The Review continues contributing to the dialogue on developments in international law by publishing semiannual issues containing scholarly articles on a variety of topics written by prominent practitioners, politicians, professors, and students from around the globe.

What is Hein's Current Content Model?

Hein's Current Content model allows journals to publish their content directly on the HeinOnline platform. This allows users to gain online access to every article or issue as soon as it is published. Online access also includes all historical volumes, making the entire archive fully searchable in an online format.
