The History of Law School Libraries in the United States: Defining Moments

AALL Publications Series No. 76

By Glen-Peter Ahlers

The History of Law School Libraries in the United States: Defining Moments includes essays on significant events, individuals, moments in times, decisions, and paths taken that have helped shape law school libraries. Defining Moments serves as a companion volume to the History of Law School Libraries in the United States: From Laboratory to Cyberspace.

Significant events discussed in this volume include the establishment of AALL, the authorization of law school libraries to serve as government depositories, and select Association of American Law Schools (AALS) and American Bar Association (ABA) law school library standards. Furthermore, this work examines the significance of certain individuals including Christopher Columbus Langdell and Frederick Charles Hicks.

About Glen-Peters Ahlers

Glen-Peter Ahlers has enjoyed over 30 years of law library service including 20 years as Library Director or Associate Dean. He's served as President of MAALL, SWALL, and the Mid-America Law School Library Consortium; chaired the AALS Section on Law Libraries and served on two dozen ABA site inspection teams. He also served on the Scribes Board and as Executive Director of Scribes, The American Association of Legal Writers.

Today he is a full-time classroom professor and writes on topics outside the law and law library fields as well.
