

Judicial Cases Concerning American Slavery and the Negro

Available Free via HeinOnline's Slavery in America and the World: History, Culture & Law Database

This five-volume set provides a summary of almost every reported case on slavery in the United States, the British Isles, and Canada before 1875. Created well before legal materials were computerized—indeed before there were computers—this remarkable work took almost a decade to complete. The editor, Helen T. Catterall, passed away before the final volume was finished.

This is an indispensable tool for the study of slavery and race before 1875. Countless historians have used the volumes to quote from state and federal cases on slavery.

Digitization of this title has expanded and enhanced existing indexing. This makes this incredible collection even more valuable.

Catterall's work covers cases from before 1875. HeinOnline's Slavery in America and the World: History, Culture & Law database helps to expand upon her work by including cases from 1875-1910 in the Judicial Cases subcollection, in addition to the complete Catterall set.
